Clinton in't Veld, founder and past Chief Executive Officer of the X-Pert Group of companies and author of the dynamic and internationally recognised Managing By Project® (MBP®) methodology, has worked in the professional field of project management in the 80's.

Clinton, together with his management team, has successfully grown the X-Pert Group into a multi-million dollar, prestigious and successful Managing By Project and Project Management Consulting and Training organisation, with representation in several countries, including the Australian operation, that Clinton now runs as Managing Director.

Clinton started his project management career as Project Manager in charge of a national bar code scanning implementation for a major retail chain. Clinton in't Veld has since facilitated and consulted to an impressive list of local and international organisations and has worked on major business projects in such diverse fields as Retail, Financial Services, Pharmaceuticals, Mining, Marketing and Public Relations, Information Technology, Correctional Services, Military, Petro-Chemicals, Transportation, Media and Entertainment, Telecommunications, National, Regional and Local Government, Fast Moving Consumable Goods and Sports Administration.

Clinton in't Veld is past Vice President Special Projects of the South Africa Chapter of the International Project Management Institute (PMI®), Member of the Australian Institute of Project Management (AIPM), founder and past chairman of the Association of Project and Change Management (APCM), past President of PMI's Education and Training Special Interest Group (SIG) in the USA and current Director of Education for the Project Management Institute (Western Australia).

Clinton has written an impressive number of articles and papers on the new art and science of Managing By Project (MBP®). He has attended numerous Project Management congresses and training academies in Africa, Europe, America, Middle East, Asia, and Australia, and has presented and guided several thousand delegates in modern day Managing By Project and Project Management, related topics and simulations around the world.

Clinton has been invited as a guest speaker on a number of regional radio stations and has appeared on several business featured television inserts. Clinton has also been invited by a number of business schools as a guest lecturer on MBA and undergraduate courses.

In the year 2000, Clinton was nominated runner up out of 560 entrants in the South Africa Boss of the Year competition awards. Clinton was also the brain child of the popular project management awards competition, Project Manager Of The Year (PMOTY).

Clinton in't Veld, completed his first book in 2000, entitled "Turning Point", an exciting in depth look into how organisations can benefit from project management in a competitive business world. His book was accepted into the PMI's Resource Library in 2001.

Having expanded the X-Pert Group into several countries, Clinton now lives in Australia and continues his active and driving role, in introducing his company's value-adding Managing By Project and Project Management solutions both locally and abroad.

Clinton is a dynamic and sought after speaker.
